Access to health, a fundamental right

Taking a closer look
Worth Project

The Women's Right to Health project promoted by the Reference Centre for Epidemiology and Cancer Prevention in Piemonte (CPO), aims to reduce the incidence and mortality rate of women's breast and cervical malignancies through the design and implementation of a comprehensive cancer control strategy.

How?

IMPROVING POLICIES Promote the implementation of a comprehensive cervical and breast cancer control strategy, in line with national public policies and in close in line with national public policies and in close coordination with national health authorities and local health care practitioners.

BUILDING CAPACITIES

RAISING AWARENESS

Increase cancer awareness and health literacy among women as an important factor of their overall empowerment. Build the capacity of national health systems to develop cancer control initiatives, driven by ownership, alignment, standardisation, mutual accountability and results-focused monitoring.
